Taste Of The Stadium Hits Vegas! See The Unique, Must-Have Sports Party Tray This Weekend

AUSTIN – Just in time for the Super Bowl, the Taste of the Stadium party tray will be on display at Booth 1129 of the Sports Licensing & Tailgate Show that runs Sunday to Tuesday, January 24-26, 2016.

“Preparing for a Super Bowl party inspired the Taste of the Stadium concept,” says co-inventor Barbara Schlieff. “So it’s apt that we’re bringing this one-of-a-kind product to the show just weeks before the big game.”

Shaped and decorated like a modern sports stadium, the fully assembled, 31” x 35” tray is perfect for any sports-themed party at home, tailgates or almost anywhere.

Veggies, cookies, chips and crackers easily fit into loaf-sized slots in the stands. Down on the 13” x 9” field (also the gridiron or pitch) is a great place for dips and salsas.

Party hosts can easily and quickly assemble the stadium. Very importantly, it’s constructed of food-safe, biodegradable materials that can be thrown away or cleaned for further use.

The Taste of the Stadium is affordably priced at $35 and can be ordered at eBay or Amazon. Based in Austin, Texas, D&B Joint Ventures LLC markets Taste of the Stadium. Design and utility patents are pending.

The Sports Licensing and Tailgate Show runs Sunday, January 24 – Tuesday, January 26 in the South Hall, lower level, of the Las Vegas Convention Center. The Convention Center is located at 3150 Paradise Rd. Both Schlieff and co-inventor Dwain Osborne will be available for more information.

“Come on by Booth 1129 and grab a snack from the stadium,” Schlieff says. “As we say in Texas, the Taste of the Stadium is a real hoot.”
